Intellectual property

Your ideas.
Your innovations.
Your brand.

Whether your concern is stopping copycats or counterfeiters, launching an advertising campaign, securing brand ambassadors, leveraging social media, creating an online presence or tapping into new technology, our IP lawyers understand how these assets make your business unique, and we know how to protect them.

There's a reason why more than half of the world's top 100 brands (Financial Times, 2015) have chosen us to represent them. With 400 IP professionals worldwide, we combine a global outlook with local knowledge across the life cycle of IP assets – from development to commercialization, and licensing through to maturity. But it's not how many lawyers we have; it's the way we work together that our clients really value.

We live and breathe IP.
And we know consumer brands.

We can help you manage your entire brand portfolio, doing everything from trademark monitoring to building and consolidating the strategic position of your trademarks. Nationally and across borders – we build, manage, and enforce your IP assets.

Key areas:

- Enforcement and litigation
- Protecting and registering IP
- Portfolio management
- Monitoring
- Risk management strategy
- Clearance searches
- Prosecution
- Defending objections and oppositions

Whether you are considering a transaction or managing your portfolio, we are skilled at analyzing the value of IP rights to help you make informed decisions and maximize value.

Knowledge. Efficiency. Practicality.

With our global reach, our network of lawyers supports your global strategy as a one-stop shop.

Advertising and labeling

What you say matters to your customers.

But regulators and consumer watchdog groups are also monitoring how you label your goods and the types of claims you make. Seemingly harmless labels have specific meanings to regulatory authorities around the world. Likewise, product claims must be supported by more than good intentions.

From creating cutting edge advertising campaigns that don't cross the line to challenging competitor claims, you need a team that is focused, creative and clear on your objectives.

Discerning what types of claims are permissible, and where the landmines lie can be a tricky task.

We help you understand where regulators draw boundaries by working closely with you to understand your product's benefits and your communication objectives. But we also understand that you must advance these goals in a manner that does not dilute the strength of your underlying advertising strategy.

Capabilities:

- Clearance of advertising
- Claims substantiation
- Private litigation
- Challenges from competitors/customers
- Product composition
- Product classification, licensing and CE marking

Our team understands the rules across major jurisdictions and can help you navigate these regulatory issues on a global scale.

Our experience and industry knowledge enables us to help you identify regulatory and commercial issues before they arise. If your advertising is ultimately challenged, our compliance and products liability teams are ready to guide you through government enforcement actions and/or private litigation.

Promotions and pricing

Price can be king, and how you present it to consumers is key.

Pricing strategies are increasingly scrutinized – by regulators, competitors, and others. You have to consider national and international legal restrictions, as well as industry and other voluntary codes of practice.

Whether you are discounting products, comparing pricing, establishing a resale price or an advertised pricing policy, we can help you comply with the relevant regulations.

Are your prices clearly visible, readable, and assigned to a particular product?

Are you required to include VAT and other charges (such as shipping costs) in your final price? Perhaps you are showing your consumers a previous reference price, but is it realistic?

We help clients across jurisdictions navigate common legal pitfalls when developing advertising and pricing strategies including: comparative advertising, native advertising, product pricing, endorsements, promotions, prize draws and potentially antitrust/competition issues in relation to pricing and discounts (including in relation to online sales).

Key areas:

- Promotional terms and conditions
- Sponsorships
- Pricing issues
- Talent agreements
- Antitrust/competition compliance
- Charitable tie-ups
- Endorsements and brand ambassadors

You can achieve your commercial goals while balancing the risks of regulator or private party complaints or litigation.

There is often more than one way to reach an important business objective, and we help find the best approach to your challenges, and develop custom measures to avert future complaints.

There are both opportunities and risk to developing claims and campaigns to support your story. We provide practical, actionable advice to find the right path for you.

Digital and online

Online business. Rapid delivery.
Supply chain innovation.
Automation. Drones. New methods of obtaining marketing intelligence.

Digitization continues to revolutionize traditional business models, reshaping customer interactions and transactions. Navigating the digital economy is no longer an option. It is a necessary part of doing business.

How do you ensure that your online operations are compliant?

As the digital and social media landscape evolves, you may consider novel ways to reach consumers. Native advertisements, bloggers, vloggers, endorsers, and online sweepstakes and contests are creative tactics, but it's not always clear what is within the bounds of applicable regulations.

We keep our finger on the pulse of enforcement actions coming out of consumer protection authorities around the world, so we can guide you as you develop new digital or social media strategies, considering everything from data protection, consumer contracts, mandatory notices, promotions and the customer experience to IP licensing and enforcement and antitrust issues related to pricing and sales across channels.

With ever-changing consumer behavior, expanding technologies and the meteoric rise in online sales, it is challenging to keep up with new regulatory requirements and anticipate coming regulatory changes. We support you as you innovate, tackle novel and complex compliance questions, and, if necessary, restructure your operations based on new business models.

As the retail and consumer products industry becomes ever more global, our international reach helps you manage compliance across borders.

Whether you are a traditional retailer, manufacturer, outsourced service provider, or developer of innovative buying technology, driving sales and revenue in the new economy, with different revenue sources and novel real property needs and obligations, requires the right strategy. That's where we come in.

Privacy and cybersecurity

Your data is immensely valuable.

The data you hold about consumers provides essential insight into their preferences and buying habits. Big data tools, machine learning, cross-device linking, facial recognition, location-based insights, and other innovative technologies can help you tap into the value contained in consumer data. This knowledge can be used to improve your products, identify new markets, promote consumer engagement, evaluate store layouts and increase sales.

The data you hold about your employees is valuable too.

Mining employee data can help reduce inefficiencies, identify growth opportunities, and identify legal and regulatory risk. If you have a global workforce, centralizing that data in one jurisdiction may reduce costs and streamline global operations.

But your data is also a source of risk.

The global privacy landscape is shifting rapidly. To maintain and establish compliance, you need to navigate the thicket of local and national laws that do not always align. The very technologies that promise to deliver great worth are often the same ones that sit in the regulatory crosshairs. When data is transferred across national borders, the rules

Regulatory compliance

Getting your product to market is increasingly complex, no matter where you operate.

Product compliance issues impact all levels of the supply chain for manufacturers and retailers.

Regulatory requirements affect what you include in your products, and how you market and sell them. From chemicals regulations to age-restricted products and food hygiene to electrical products regulations, now more than ever, it's important to understand the huge range of regulatory requirements at play, and be prepared for sudden changes.

Are you thinking of launching a new product line?

The risk profile and regulatory requirements differ from product to product and country to country. Who in the supply chain is responsible for product labeling and packaging? What remedies are consumers entitled to by law? Do you need to offer an additional warranty?

One third of our lawyers worldwide operate in the regulatory sphere, setting us apart from other full-service global firms.

Our experience and in-depth industry knowledge enables us to identify issues before they arise. We regularly assist clients in highly regulated areas across a range of industries to navigate complex compliance issues, making sure their products are safe.

Our team is ready help you manage regulatory challenges, including coordinating with authorities and supporting you in minimizing regulatory risk and litigation and reputational exposure.

Supply chain

Your supply chain is critical to your success.

Developing your product and getting it to market is just the beginning. The terms on which payment is to be made will help determine both the financial consequences and the financial risk associated with the contract. Whether your goal is to optimize your value chain by shortening the payment cycle for accounts receivable, lengthening the payment cycle for accounts payable, or managing your transfer pricing, we can help.

Our lawyers regularly advise clients on choice of law and compliance with legislation that has developed in many jurisdictions to protect suppliers from nonpayment. Our tax team and economists help you create a transfer pricing program that fits your business model and maximizes tax savings.

How do you manage commercial risk?

How do you ensure that your product is compliant? Can you terminate for non-payment or failure to deliver on time? What are your options upon the occurrence of a force majeure event? Our commercial team deals with these issues every day and can help you protect your supply chain with practical, commercial-focused counsel.

Key areas:

- Warehousing and logistics
- Business to business sales
- Product recalls
- Product liability
- Antitrust/competition
- Anti-bribery and corruption
- Modern slavery
- Development, manufacturing, supply, distribution agreements

It's not just financial.

Retailers face increased scrutiny of their supply chains, from certification and country of origin requirements to anti-bribery and corruption issues and modern slavery legislation. A misstep can have far reaching reputational and regulatory consequences.

Structuring and documenting your supply chain arrangements can be complicated.

We have helped some of the world's largest companies applying the latest legal project management techniques in a quality, cost-effective manner, getting it right and doing it efficiently.

Tax

A business world teeming with pressures.

The need for innovation and growth to stay competitive. Increased cross border activity. Heightened regulation. Not to mention the challenging tax environment, complex tax rules, greater tax transparency, and authorities acting on mandates to protect the tax base. All against a backdrop of media attention.

You need clear, pragmatic tax advice to navigate this world.

Measured advice that appropriately combines innovation and prudence. You need advisers who are one step ahead and recognize not just the value of maximizing after-tax profit, but the value of tax carry-forwards and how import duties, sales taxes and value-added taxes fit into your commercial arrangements with manufacturers or service providers.

We support retail and consumer products businesses from start to finish.

From choosing your global or regional base of operation, to registering your group companies, complying with tax laws and managing your audits.

Whether you are negotiating supply, distribution or customer agreements, applying for VAT refunds, structuring your intra-group agreements, expanding into new jurisdictions, acquiring premises leasing or even structuring manufacturer's warranties, customer loyalty or bonus programs or granting gifts to business partners – we understand and can guide you through the tax implications.

Key areas:

- VAT and other sales taxes
- Transfer pricing
- Business expenses
- Tax implications of leasing premises
- Stamp duty land tax impact

We're different – an integrated team of lawyers, accountants, and economists, we have the breadth and depth of knowledge you need in dealing with tax. From tax consulting to transactional tax advice, from tax optimization to tax valuations, from legislative guidance to tax audits and disputes. You can trust us to get it right. By being involved at all stages – planning, implementation, and review – we help you appropriately manage risk.

We pride ourselves on our knowledge of the retail and consumer products industry.

We understand your business levers. We also draw on the skills of other members of our top-class sector teams so that you have the complete advice you need, when you need it. We build tax strategies that work for your business as a whole.

Real estate development and construction

Changing consumer behavior. Globalization. Digitalization.

All of these things have changed the ways companies think about their online presence and brick and mortar operations. You must reckon with global trends -- how and where your goods are best manufactured, stored and shipped, and the ways in which your customers seek out your products.

Do you own, rent, or sublease your stores, factories, or warehouse facilities? Do you build them from scratch?

Are your agreements flexible, so that you can more easily move locations, reduce store sizes, or close them? The dynamics of the retail industry are changing, and one thing is for sure. In a fast moving industry, retailers need to respond quickly to changes if they want to stay competitive.

The lawyers at Hogan Lovells know the retail and consumer products industry, real estate and the disruptors that impact our clients.

Whether you are negotiating a lease or purchasing, selling, developing, building or financing, and be it a brick and mortar store, a sales office, a distribution center, warehouse or other facility, we can help. On the development and construction side, we handle environmental issues, compliance, building codes and standards across jurisdictions, land use and planning matters.

With more than 400 lawyers advising real estate industry clients across four continents, we can help you across the entire property lifecycle – wherever you are in the world. We have helped retail and consumer products clients navigate and redefine some of the most complex and high-profile real estate deals.

We combine our industry knowledge with a practical and collaborative approach to problem solving.

Our client relationships are strong because they are built on mutual respect. We talk the language of real estate. We will tell you the way we see it and work with you to get the deal done.

Employment

Unions.
Country managers.
Sales representatives.

Independent contractors. Overtime.
Non-competes and non-solicitations.

In the competitive world of retail and consumer products, a company's workforce is one of its most important assets. Managing employees in today's global market is complex and requires knowledge of changing national statutes and case law. In many cases, national and international legal requirements and cultural factors influence daily work life.

Are you expanding your business into a new market and seeking to align your strategy to local employment law requirements while also keeping your broader goals in perspective. Are you managing an existing workforce, outsourcing parts of your operations or planning a reduction in force? Or are you simply trying to protect your human assets and business against competition?

You need an advisor who guides you through tough legal challenges by understanding your business and creating workable solutions.

Our top-ranked global team advises on all types of employment challenges and opportunities, wherever in the world they occur. It's about more than just knowing the law. It's about knowing your business and people. Understanding the business sensitivities that surround each matter. Foreseeing and averting complications. Helping you to make informed decisions that minimize workforce risk. And finding solutions that work.

Key areas:

- Workplace and employee handbooks
- Day-to-day HR matters (minimum wages, shift work models, and working time restrictions)
- Litigation and arbitration
- Employee co-determination rights, labor negotiations
- Executive compensation
- Separations
- Redundancies
- Acquired Rights Directive and business transfers

We combine the diverse and collective strengths of our more than 120 employment lawyers in offices across the United States, Europe, Latin America, the Middle East, Africa, Australia, and Asia. As an integrated, cross border team, we counsel retail and consumer products clients on expanding their businesses across the globe. Our advice is field-tested and, at the same time, carefully tailored to your specific business needs and objectives.

Clients particularly value our ability to combine legal advice with a client-centric and pragmatic approach.

We talk with our retail and consumer products clients every day in clear and straightforward terms about complicated employment-related and industry-specific issues. Whether you are facing employment related issues in one country or around the world, we're here to help.

- Technical standards
- Fact finding
- Experts
- Group claim procedures
- Interacting with regulatory agencies
- Handling government investigations and recalls

Managing a product incident is not an easy task. When does a defect rise to the level of a safety risk? What are the best practices for managing these issues? In understanding and analyzing a product issue, the conflicting interests of multiple stakeholders can be a challenge to negotiate. Safety incidents can impact the whole of the product supply chain – from retailer to manufacturer.

We routinely work with companies on developing internal procedures so that potential issues are identified and addressed as soon as possible.

When government reporting obligations come into play, we know not just the law but also how the regulators think and how they would likely respond to a given fact pattern.

When an issue arises, we become an integral part of your team, working across borders shoulder to shoulder with you, identifying expert resources when warranted, and guiding internal investigations to help protect against future problems, managing recalls and claims, and defending against litigation.

If circumstances warrant, we bring in our crisis management team to coordinate governmental and media communications. We provide nimble, informed legal counsel to evaluate when and what type of corrective action is appropriate.

We understand that our clients require us to deliver practical and cost-effective advice, be aware of their commercial sensitivities, and act in a coordinated manner across different jurisdictions around the world.

Antitrust/Competition

Expansion of e-Commerce.
New customer demands.
Alternative distribution models.
Price transparency.

Be ready.

Keeping up with competition laws can be complex and time-consuming. As laws continue to evolve at a rapid pace, companies face new challenges and risks. Regulatory scrutiny is heightened and the consequences of noncompliance become more extreme all the time. Companies that get it wrong face criminal and financial penalties, litigation, disrupted deals and reputational damage. Our global competition team can help you anticipate and address these risks before they become problems.

Competition authorities are watching the consumer sector.

Fair competition and consumer rights are on top of the agenda for competition authorities. One of the world's leading competition authorities – the European Commission (the Commission) – recently conducted a sector inquiry into e-commerce which identified business practices that could restrict competition. This has led to an increase in antitrust enforcement in e-commerce markets and the initiation of [several][numerous] investigations. Other competition authorities around the globe are following developments and market trends in the retail and consumer goods industries with a view to gathering evidence of competition barriers. recommendations and other commercial practices (as well as their underlying rationale) when devising their sales and distribution strategies. We provide practical, actionable advice to find the right path for you and ensure you can remain competitive and profitable without breaking competition rules.

We understand the challenges and opportunities in your sector.

We have worked on complex matters for clients ranging from product developers and manufacturers to retailers, from mass marketers to top luxury brands. Our lawyers approach issues from a commercial, as well as legal, perspective. We know that increasingly sophisticated consumers are causing seismic changes in development, marketing, pricing and delivery of products and services, and we are ready to assist you to adjust to these new dynamics.

We are well connected and can provide advocacy support.

We don't just know the government agencies and authorities you'll have to deal with – we've been part of them.
