

Kevin R. Burke

Partner

Denver

Biography

As a partner in the Corporate & Finance practice group, Kevin Burke strongly believes in taking a practical and commercially focused approach to transactional matters of all types, helping to get the deal done while protecting his clients' interests and minimizing their risks. And, with a finance background, he's not afraid of a balance sheet or a complex working capital adjustment.

Kevin regularly counsels an array of private entities on transactional and general corporate matters, including private capital raising and exit transactions. He has also advised issuers and underwriters in public and private offerings of debt, equity, hybrid capital, and asset-backed securities.

Kevin's practice includes a range of corporate matters, with a focus on private equity, mergers and acquisitions, divestitures, joint ventures, securities and capital raising transactions, and corporate governance matters across a wide variety of industries. He is well-versed in international affairs, having handled cross-border transactions in many countries, including Canada, the United Kingdom, Hong Kong, China, Switzerland, and Mexico.

Prior to joining Hogan Lovells, Kevin worked in the Washington, D.C. office of another leading international
